A GOLDEN FETTER.

BY CARRIE D. BEEBE.

Alice Wayne had been in the seventh heaven of delight all summer; or, to speak within bounds, she had been in that deliciously sweet and uncertain state which newly-engaged young people enjoy when they seem especially adapted to each other. Hal. Anthon, her betrothed, was very devoted. By some piece of strategy he obtained an invitation to pass the heated term at Mrs. Payson's where Alice was spending the summer, and as they had only been engaged since Easter week, everything was, as she herself confessed to Hal., "just lovely."

There was quite a large company at Mrs. Payson's, but the dear old lady had a way of inventing diversions for them all. The library was large, and roomy enough for those of her guests who liked quiet. The parlors were more especially devoted to those who were fond of music and dancing. Then there was a lake near for any who fancied rowing, horses and carriages in abundance, three sets of croquet out in the orchard which was always shaded, and besides, she had a capital table, with meals at regular hours.

Alice enjoyed everything. Some times she had a quiet ride with Hal.; they sang, danced and played croquet together, and besides, he whispered all sorts of pretty and quaint pet names around corners, and almost in the hearing of demure old ladies, just for the sake of seeing her pretty start and warning look. Daring kisses were thrown for the same purpose, and all this was accomplished with very few exposures and mistakes. It is true he called Mrs. Hunt, who at the least calculation weighed a hundred and ninety, his little "Zephyr;" and it is equally true that the lady, mistaking both the man and his remark (for it was just before the hall lamp was lighted), rushed down stairs as fast as possible, declaring a strange man had insulted her by calling her a "heifer." And once when Mrs. Payson came out of Alice's room in the twilight, she was astonished to receive a sudden embrace from a pair of strong arms, though she had the presence of mind to box Hal's ears before he had bestowed upon her the kiss meant for Alice.

But all things, sooner or later, must come to an end, and so did the pretty dream Alice had been dreaming all summer. A new excitement came to Mrs. Payson's, in the shape of Mrs. Hunt's niece, a tall, handsome young lady of twenty, who dressed elaborately, talked showily, and created a sensation generally. She patronized Alice from the first, and, of course, from the first Alice disliked her. Not so Hal. He declared her perfectly beautiful, and espoused her cause so warmly that he and Alice quarreled about it on the first night of Miss Hunt's arrival.

"I don't know how we could ever have disputed about such a trifle," thought Alice, as she took down her hair before her mirror that night. "I must have been very ill-natured, for dear old Hal. is so easy to manage."

They had a reconciliation in the morning; but Alice felt as though something was lacking in Hal's manner all day, and that evening he flirted with Miss Hunt outrageously. So things went on from bad to worse, until one day, coming suddenly out on the porch where they were sitting, Alice overheard Hal. calling Miss Hunt some of the very pet names which in her innocence she had supposed he devoted to her especial use.

She turned quickly, before they discovered her, and walked through the hall to the library, went in, and closed the door. To her hasty glance the room seemed deserted, and she threw herself into an armchair, exclaiming:

"There isn't a true man in the world! O, dear! O, dear! I wish I were dead!"

As she glanced up through her blinding tears, she was dimly conscious of a tall form beside her, and at the same time a kind voice said:

"I am sorry to see you in trouble, Miss Alice, have you had bad news? No matter," quickly; "I suppose I have no right to hear it, but I am older than you, and I know this sorrow, whatever it may be, will soon pass away. Don't yield to it; don't brood over it; but meet it bravely and crush it at once. Can I help you in any way?"

"No one can help me," she said, bitterly; "but I thank you, Mr. Fetter, just the same."

She rose unsteadily from the chair and groped toward the door, trying to force back her tears and stifle her emotion, though she trembled violently. Without a word the man followed, took her hand within his arm, and led her up a back stairway to her room. He left her, just as silently, and she, too utterly desolate and miserable to feel grateful, locked the door, and burst into a storm of sobs and weeping.

I know this wasn't the way a heroine should have done; but little Alice was only an inexperienced girl of eighteen, who now had her first hard lesson in life thrust upon her, and who, girl-like, was determined to learn it in the hardest possible way.

So, after she had wept until her eyes were swollen, her face burning, and her head throbbing painfully, she lay passive and exhausted in a sort of numb despair, and thinking but little beyond the pain in her head.

Two o'clock came, the dinner hour. She would be missed, and must plead headache. No one must know her trouble, though she felt that all would guess it. She'd get up an elaborate toilet for supper, however, no matter if her head was bursting; and if she looked pale—why, she'd borrow some paint of Miss Sharpe, who used it profusely; nobody should think she cared.

She rose to bathe her face, and found that she was both weak and faint; and when the servant who took down her excuse to Mrs. Payson brought her a slice of toast and cup of tea, she ate the one and drank the other with a relish, another proof of her unheroine-like deportment.

By this time she was ready to look the matter squarely in the face. Of course it was very well known through the house that she and Hal. were engaged, and the pretty pearl ring on her forefinger was his gift. Every one must know, too, that he had deserted her for Miss Hunt; and in spite of her attempts to be merry, they could not help seeing that it had almost broken her heart. They should not see it longer, she decided, shutting her lips hard together. She would give him back his ring this very day, and then she'd flirt with whoever happened in her way. But would anybody notice her? she began to ask herself. She had only just been civil to the rest of the gentlemen in the house, for Hal. had taken up all her thought and time. And then she had not been a flirt naturally; she could not bring adorers to her side like Miss Hunt, with a look, which, though it seemed modest, was really very bold.

She sat down and counted the gentlemen on her fingers. There was Mr. Fetter, who was very wealthy, but so eccentric, or distant, rather, no one would flirt with him. Miss Howe, who had been the belle before Miss Hunt came, had tried her arts upon him in vain. Out of chagrin, more than anything else, she had dubbed him "The Golden Fetter," and by that name he was usually called.

He had scarcely noticed Alice until to-day, and then she began to think how kind he was. She was glad it was no one else, for she felt sure he would never expose her secret, for of course he had heard every word she said.

O dear! she could never flirt with Mr. Fetter, or anyone else. She wished she was away from the hateful place.

There was a knock at the door. She started up in alarm. No one must see her in such a state; they'd know she had been crying her eyes out.

"It's nobody but me, dear," and Mrs. Payson's motherly voice, reassured her.

"I said there shouldn't a soul come in until I saw how you were," continued Mrs. Payson, as Alice opened the door. "See what I've brought you."

She held up a cluster of pale pink and white moss rosebuds, and Alice caught at them eagerly, wondering if Hal. had repented, after all.

"They're from Mr. Fetter," said Mrs. Payson, "and he wishes me to say to you he would like you to ride over to the falls with him this afternoon, if you felt able to do so. It's only an hour's ride there, a beautiful road, and you will be back before supper. I should consider it quite an honor, if I were you, for he hasn't taken a soul out to ride this summer but me. He said the fresh air might do you good, and I'm sure it will. Now sit right down, and I'll go and tell Mr. Fetter you accept, and then send Sarah to put up your hair.

Alice yielded quietly. Hal. certainly did not intend to return to his old love, for, though he supposed her ill, he had sent no word. She must give him back his ring as soon as possible, and forget what they had been to each other. Well, it was hard, but then others had borne the same sorrow and forgotten; she might, in time, perhaps.

Sarah arranged her hair becomingly, and Alice drew some of the pink buds through it. Then she put on a silver-gray poplin, a dainty lace sack, a jaunty hat trimmed with gray ribbon and pink buds, and drawing some more of the buds through her white lace tie, she looked very pretty. Her cheeks were rather more flushed than usual; luckily she wouldn't need the paint, after all. And then she thought she must be terribly matter-of-fact, when trouble wouldn't make her pale.

There was a little conscious flutter among the guests when she came down stairs. She looked about, hoping to find Hal. alone, for she had tucked away his ring in the palm of her left hand glove, and she wished to give it back to him before she went out.

But he stood out on the porch, leaning carelessly back against a pillar, and Miss Hunt sat close beside him. Mr. Fetter stood waiting at the foot of the steps to conduct her to the carriage. Hal. looked unconscious, and Miss Hunt patronizing, as usual; something in the manner of each angered Alice.

She looked toward Mr. Fetter; his glance gave her courage to carry out the bold purpose which suddenly flashed through her mind. She turned toward her old lover with a staid dignity which impressed all who were near.

"Hal," she said, quietly, "we have played out our little farce before all the guests; perhaps we had better have the ending and then let the curtain fall. Here is your ring." She looked in his face without drooping her clear eyes. "I have never flirted with, or encouraged in any way, another gentleman, since you placed it on my hand. Still"—and a suspicion of a bitter smile crept in her—"you cannot be so glad to receive it as I am to give it back to you."

She laid the ring in his hand, bowed, and turning, took Mr. Fetter's arm. Hal. colored from the roots of his hair to his finger-tips, but he did not speak a word. Miss Hunt, for once, looked embarrassed. The guests glanced towards Alice's slight figure admiringly, but seemed hushed in a silent awe.

Alice trembled as Mr. Fetter handed her into the carriage, and a teardrop beaded either drooping lash; only one, for in a moment she had conquered her emotion.

Mr. Fetter was silent, but there was something in his manner which told Alice he approved her action.

"Did I do right?" she asked, looking up at last.

"Quite right," he said. "Miss Alice," with sudden energy, "I know, by experience, that your heart is still very sore. Won't you let me be your friend, and help you to bear your trouble?"

She looked up into his eyes. They were gray, but large and kindly, and there was a look of latent power about him that a woman likes to see in the man she calls her friend. The excessively tender look which Hal's. face had worn when he had been her lover, was wanting altogether in Mr. Fetter's expression, but there was something Alice liked even better in its stead.

He held out his hand quietly, and she placed hers in it unhesitatingly.

"Thank you"; she said; "I—I do need a friend, and I believe I can trust you."

"You may," he answered soberly.

"Don't think," she hastened to say, "that I want to give to others the idea that we are having a flirtation. You have very kindly helped me to bear the first shock. I shall not be afraid or ashamed hereafter, even if I do not receive much attention from the gentlemen guests."

"I understand you fully," he answered, "and shall not give you much pity, for in my opinion you need none. You mean to say you need a friend, but that is all; you have done with lovers now and forever."

"I have made no resolves," she replied. "I have not looked far into the future since it has changed its hue so completely. By-and-by I shall; now, I am only glad you are my friend, and with that assurance, feel quite content."

He bowed and changed the conversation. The ride was a pleasant one, and when they returned Alice felt almost like her old self once more. When she entered her room to remove her hat the old shadow seemed to envelop her, but she cast it aside, and went down to the parlor, more tranquil than she had been for a long time before.

Friends gathered around her, and in the bustle and excitement of the evening she saw little of Mr. Fetter, but he stood in the hall when she went to retire, and gave her a smiling good-night. She had felt so desolate before, ever since Miss Hunt's arrival, and had missed Hal's caresses and tender words sadly. But how could she be unhappy when a man whose friendship was so valuable as Mr. Fetter's, had proved himself her friend in the true sense of the word?

For a few days past she had been the constant subject of remark, and all looked upon her with pitying eyes; the very sort of pity, too, which was so galling to a proud, sensitive heart. By a bold though not unmaidenly move, she had turned the tables, and was now looked upon by the guests as a heroine. She knew it, and felt it throughout the evening, by the deferential manner in which all the guests treated her, while Hal and Miss Hunt seemed utterly discomfited, and cast in the shade.

But Alice knew very well that she could not have carried out this move so effectively if Mr. Fetter had not given her his aid and support. And there was not one of all the guests who would not be glad to call him friend.

After this she had many opportunities for flirting if she had cared for it. Attentions were showered upon her, but naturally quiet in her tastes, she received them without any display on her part. Still, she offended no one; on the contrary she became a general favorite. Hal. Anton, finding it his turn to be talked about, found it convenient to be called away on business; and Miss Hunt soon left with her aunt. The guests thinned a little, but Alice and Mr. Fetter remained.

Mornings were usually spent in the library, and Mr. Fetter would read aloud from a favorite author, while Alice was engaged with some fancy needlework. Afternoons were spent in walking, riding or rowing and so the season passed away. Mr. Fetter was devoted but not loverlike. He never praised her beauty, he never called her pet names, never kissed or caressed her in any way. But sometimes his eyes would express more than the tenderest words could have done, and

THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The Republicans of the State met in convention in Harrisburg last Thursday and had quite a lively time of it. It was Quay from beginning to end. Congressman Robinson of Media and C. L. Magee of Pittsburg were very much opposed to giving Quay the endorsement for President. They insisted that in the event that Quay is not nominated the state should declare for McKinley, but they were refused even this satisfaction. There was a contest for the state chairmanship between Frank Willing Leach and John P. Elkin. When it was found that this was likely to create trouble Senator Quay concluded to continue as chairman himself.

It is remarkable that Quay should have such absolute power over his party in this state and that he should hold it so long, practically without interruption.

The platform commends the Republican party for its principles and for its phenomenally large majorities in the state and eulogizes Senator Quay as its candidate for the presidency.

It declares protection to American industries to be the foremost national issue and asserts very confidently that this will be restored as soon as the Republicans again come into power. It also favors Blaine's reciprocity policy which in Harrison's administration so greatly benefited American commerce. It also favors protection to ship owners and our American ship-building interests.

After eulogizing the party for its past record and particularly for giving the country a sound, stable national bank currency, it has the following on the all-absorbing silver question:

"Faithful to its record, believing that the people are entitled to the use of the best money, and anxious to restore and preserve the industrial and commercial prosperity of the union, the Republican party favors international bimetalism, and until that can be established upon a secure basis opposes the coinage of silver, except upon government account, and demands the maintenance of the existing gold standard of value."

The present administration is denounced for its pension policy.

The enactment of laws which will restrict the immigration of undesirable foreigners is recommended.

Governor Hastings' administration is commended for its economy, and therefore is entitled to the continued confidence of the people of Pennsylvania. The reform declarations of the platform of 1895 were reaffirmed.

ROENTGEN RAYS ARE NEEDED.

According to a brief editorial in Monday's Repository one would be led to believe that the Republican party in this county is in the grasp of an "octopus" and that the Repository is looked to by many honest Republicans to set the party free from the clutches of this monster which is also called a "ring" and a "clique." As clean politicians and clean political methods are desirable in all parties it is to be hoped that the Repository will be successful in its efforts at ridding the party of a power that threatens to make it disreputable. But we have read considerable of this kind of writing in the Repository since the county Republican convention and we think it is about time that we should have a "bill of particulars." Where are the "ring," "clique" and "octopus" that must be crushed? The public have a right to know who these awfully wicked politicians are. It might be well to have the X rays turned on with a little more vividness, that is, if the Repository's insinuations have any foundation, and are not born of disappointment only.

IN MEMORY OF GRANT'S BIRTHDAY.

The 74th anniversary of the birth of General Grant was observed in a number of places on Monday. The exercises at Galena, Illinois, and at Pittsburg were very interesting. His memory is still fresh in the minds and hearts of all who had part in the work that preserved the Union in the memorable years of 1861-65. He was evidently the man for the momentous time in which he lived. At 40 years of age he was a Major General and had won victories at Fort Donelson and Shiloh. Two years later he was in command of the army of the United States and in the following summer and winter he pressed the confederates to their works beyond Richmond and Petersburg and before the leaves had budded he had compelled the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. At forty-seven he was President of the United States and after eight years as Chief Executive he retired and made his memorable trip around the world.

After his return he was shown every distinction that the gratitude of the American people could suggest or bestow. Then came the financial reverses into which he was led by the unscrupulous machinations of those who desired the use of his great name to help them in financial operations. Then followed the development of the disease which eventually conquered him at Mount McGregor. Nothing is lost by the observance of such days as the anniversary of the birth of so great a soldier. May the people of the United States ever hold his name in grateful remembrance.

IMPORTANT TO SCHOOL TEACHERS.

A County Superintendent Sustained By the Superior Court.

Last summer Superintendent S. G. Rudy of Huntingdon county, refused to issue to Elmer E. Kell, a license to teach because it had been reported to him that the applicant was in the habit of using intoxicants as a beverage. Mr. Kell brought suit against the superintendent to compel him to issue the certificate or license, and gained his case. Superintendent Rudy carried the matter before the Superior Court, where the decision of the Huntingdon court was reversed. As the case has a wide application and is of much interest to many teachers and those who employ teachers, we give below a brief statement of the case and the final decision of the matter as rendered by Judge Rice, President of the Superior Court:

Following is the opinion of Judge Rice, President of the Superior Court of this State, in the case of E. E. Kell against County Superintendent S. G. Rudy of this county. Mr. Kell was refused a teacher's certificate because of his alleged use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage:

The court proceeded to dispose of the case by a consideration of the evidence pro and con as to the plaintiff's character, as to his habits in the use of intoxicants. Having arrived at the conclusion, to quote the language of the learned judge, that "the evidence wholly fails to convict him of being an habitual drinker of intoxicants, or as a man of not good moral character," the court made a decree awarding a peremptory mandamus, commanding the defendant, as county superintendent, to issue a proper legal certificate as teacher, to the plaintiff, in accordance with his educational qualifications, and directing the defendant to pay the costs.

But, passing without further comment all questions of practice and pleadings, we come to the serious questions, namely, whether the duty of the county superintendent is purely ministerial, or whether it involves the exercise of a discretionary and quasi judicial powers, and whether and to what extent the court of Common Pleas has revisory jurisdiction.

The 41st section of the Act of May 8, 1854, (P. L. 626) makes it the duty of the county superintendent to examine candidates for the profession of teaching, and to give each person, found qualified a certificate setting forth the branches of learning he or she is capable of teaching.

The same section gives him authority to annul any such certificates given by him or his predecessor in office, when he shall think proper, giving at least ten days previous notice to the teacher and to the directors where he is employed. Sect. 11 of the Act of April 9, 1867, P. L. 55, provides that no teacher shall receive from a county, city or borough superintendent a certificate as a teacher who has not a fair knowledge of certain specified, branches, and the theory of teaching; "nor shall such certificate be given to any person in the habit of using as a beverage any intoxicating drinks."

The officer who, under the law is to decide whether the applicant has the educational qualifications specified in the first part of the section is the superintendent; and it is clear that there is no appeal from the decision in that matter to the judgment of the court or jury. Being forbidden by law to issue a certificate to one who is in the habit of using intoxicants as a beverage, it is equally as clear that it is within his province to see that the policy of the law in this regard is carried out. The power to annul a certificate for proper cause, would, of itself and without more, imply a power to refuse a certificate for proper cause. The law is binding upon his conscience, and the performance of his duty requires the exercise of judgment and discretion. To say then that his duty to issue the certificate, if he finds that the applicant possesses the educational qualifications, is purely ministerial, is to deny him the power which the Legislature has clearly made it his duty to exercise when personal knowledge or a due investigation convinces him that the applicant is otherwise legally disqualified. It seems too plain for argument that the duty of the superintendent is not merely ministerial.

The learned judge below concedes that if the applicant is a person of known immoral character or a known habitual drinker of intoxicants, the county superintendent would have a right to refuse him a certificate. Having power for sufficient reason to refuse a certificate, he must, necessarily, have the power—and it is his duty to exercise it— to ascertain and determine whether the reasons exist, for the power is vested nowhere if it is not vested in him. If this be so the finality of his decision does not depend upon its absolute correctness. But it is argued the superintendent cannot arbitrarily refuse a certificate upon such grounds without giving the applicant a hearing and an opportunity to refute the charge. We assent to this unqualifiedly; but where and before whom is he entitled to a hearing? Manifestly the superintendent is the officer to hear and decide. Certainly no fair minded superintendent would refuse a certificate upon mere rumor, or even direct information, without giving the applicant a hearing upon a matter which so closely affects his reputation and means of livelihood; but we cannot agree that the mode and notice of hearing are regulated by the provision of the 41st section of the Act of 1854 relative to the annulment of a certificate.

Speaking of the power of a board of directors to dismiss a teacher, Mr. Justice Clark said: "The board, by the statute, is empowered both to employ teachers, and for one of these causes, to dismiss them. It would greatly impair the government and efficiency of the common schools, if the honest judgment and discretion of the board, exercised in good faith, could be reviewed and reversed by a jury. Such a policy would place the practical management and control of the schools on very precarious and uncertain ground. Every consideration of private interest, or of public policy, requires that this quasi judicial power of the board should be recognized. The absolute impossibility of placing the jury in the position of the school board, with the school and its instructor before them, demonstrates the fact that it would be unwise and impracticable to do otherwise" McCree vs. School Dist., 145 Pa., 55 D. All this might be said, with equal persistency, with regard to the action of a county superintendent in refusing a certificate for a legal reason. His duties and responsibilities are great. Upon his fearless, impartial and conscientious discharge of them must depend, to a large extent, the efficiency of the public schools within his district. To enable him to perform them effectively the Legislature has conferred upon him powers commensurate therewith. In his province his judgment and conscience are as free from outside control, except in the mode or for the cause prescribed by the statute, as those of a judge upon the bench; and while we have naught to do with the policy or expediency of the law, we may remark, that the dangers which are incident to the vesting of such power in the hands of one man are not greater than would be the evils if every unsuccessful applicant for a certificate might appeal from his decision, and have the question as to his educational or moral qualifications tried by a jury. We ought not to allow ourselves to be drawn away from the well settled principles governing the exercise of judicial deliberative and discretionary powers by a public officer, by the apparent hardship of particular cases. We may be sure that, if experience had shown that the power committed to county superintendents to pass upon the fitness of applicants for teachers' certificates had been found in practice to be too great, the Legislature would before this have applied the proper corrective.

The decree is reversed and set aside and the peremptory writ of mandamus is quashed.

Caught, Convicted and Sentenced.

Judge Scott, of Northampton county, at Easton Monday, sentenced Thomas Burke alias "Pittsburg Slim," and John Welsh alias "Troy Whitey," professional burglars, to ten years each in the Eastern penitentiary for burglary committed at Moyer's Mill, Hanover township, Northampton county, in December last. They were captured at Reading last month. The former is the man who shot his companion at Bridgeport, opposite Harrisburg, last summer and escaped. District Attorney Rupley, of Cumberland county, made every effort to have the man brought back, but was unsuccessful. Burke will not live to serve his sentence as he is suffering from lung trouble and has but a few years to live.

Democratic State Convention

We clip the following from the despatches sent out from Allentown Tuesday night, prognostic of the events which took place in the Democratic convention held there yesterday:

Allentown is in holiday attire. Hotels, stores and many of the residences are gay with bunting, flags and banners. The people for the moment seem to have put aside partisan feelings and give themselves up to the entertainment of their visitors. The Democracy of Pennsylvania could not have been more warmly received anywhere in the country. With the citizens of Allentown it is whole-hearted hospitality to guests.

The meeting of the executive committee, set for 11 a. m. to-day, had to be postponed until 4 p. m., because only Thomas J. Burke, John B. Storm and P. R. Cotter (substitute for Thomas Nash) were here.

As yet little or nothing has been said or done with reference to the making of a "slate" for the convention. Scarcely anybody has been talked of for either delegate-at-large or for the nomination for congressman-at-large. As a matter of course, however, National Chairman Harrity will be one of the delegates-at-large. State Senator J. Henry Coceran of Williamsport, will likely be another, and it may be that Hon. Benjamin Meyers of Harrisburg, will be given that honor, too. Allegheny county is certainly to be remembered in that connection, so that both ends of the state will be cared for.

It is said John M. Braden of Washington, will be one of the candidates for congressman-at-large, with B. C. Potts, of Media, as his running mate, if the latter will consent to the use of his name.

Nearly everybody is wearing Pattison badges, and from the enthusiasm that has been rekindled, it would seem as though the crowd of politicians were surely anticipating a victory in November.

All of Tuesday night the delegates were holding conferences for the selection of district delegates to the national convention at Chicago. These selections and also the names of persons for electors were ratified by the convention which met at noon yesterday.

William E. Gavin, of Columbia, was made temporary chairman of the convention. In his speech he committed the party to the bold standard. He eulogized Robert E. Pattison's two administrations as Governor of Pennsylvania and declared him to be a fit and proper candidate for President.

The platform declared its adherence to the fundamental principles of Democracy; favors the unwarying maintenance of the gold stand. The interests of the peoplethat the earning of all our industries and especially the wages of labor should be paid in money of the greatest intrinsic value. Therefore, it is unalterably opposed to all schemes for the debasement of our currency.

The administration of President Cleveland was heartily indorsed, especially his wise, determined and successful efforts to maintain the national credit and to avert financial and business disturbance. Dwight M. Lowery of Philadelphia, was made permanent chairman. The unit rule was continued.

The convention then proceeded to nominate the following ticket:

Congressman-at-large—John H. Braden, Washington; Benj. C. Potts, Delaware.

Delegates-at-large—William F. Harrity, Philadelphia; Robert E. Wright, Lehigh; J. Henry Cochran, Lycoming; Charles A. Fagan, Allegheny; Dr. John Todd, Montgomery; B. F. Meyers, Dauphin, John S. Rilling, Erie; John T. Lehman, Luzerne.

Electors-at-large—William M. Singerly, Philadelphia; Geo. W. Guthrie, Allegheny; James D. Hancock, Venango; A. H. Coffrath, Somerset.

The convention was the largest held for many years. The utmost harmony existed and the greatest interest taken in the result.

Among the visitors were James Sweney and C. H. Krumrine. The delegates from this county were, Hon. W. Rush Gillan, Chas. W. Cremer, Thos. Z. Minehart, Esq., W. T. Omwake, Esq., and Jacob Fendrick.

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

CONCORD.

Frank Hockenberry is a member of the grand jury this week.—Dr. V. I. McKim, Logan, spent last week with his parents in this place.—John Russell and family moved to Clearfield last week.—Miss Tillie McElhenny, McKeesport, and her sister Katharine, of Shippensburg Normal, were visitors in town last week.

Supervisor Fegan is at work repairing the roads.

James Harris celebrated his 86th birthday last week by walking three miles to attend a roast. Mr. Harris still works at his trade.

Miss Carrie McElhenny of this place and James Gallagher, of Homestead, were married in the Catholic church at Doylesburg Sunday, April 26, 1896.

The Big Spring presbytery held its sessions in this place last Tuesday and Wednesday. The meetings were well attended and everybody was well pleased with the interesting addresses on the various topics of the day.

The new Tuscarora Hotel was opened in Blair's Mills last week.

Preparations are being made for holding a Sunday school convention in this place the first week in June.

Hance Campbell has a large force of men peeling bark. He expects to peel 200 tons.

The Path Valley Mutual Fire Insurance company will meet in Dry Run Hall Monday, May 4, for the transaction of business and to elect new officers.

DOYLESBURG.

Wheat in this part of the county looks bad.

A. J. Piper our genial and obliging clerk in A. C. Clugston's store, was visiting relatives in Amberson on Sunday.

Some of the visitors in these parts we notice are Miss Lottie Hockenberry and Mrs. Hart of East Waterford, Rev. Jas. A. Harkins of Dry Run.

We are all glad to hear that Rev. J. W. Parris is appointed for the Concord charge again.

Things are in bloom again this year and there are good prospects for lots of fruit.

William I. and Charles Clugston and John Devor left on Saturday for Tioga county to peel bark.

CONGRESSMAN MAHON BUSY.

Working Energetically at the Head of His War Claims Committee.

It is rather bad for the people in this section who suffered losses by the war that so many congressmen of both political parties are opposed to or at least indifferent to the payment of those losses by the government. There is no doubt that Mr. Mahon is doing all he can in support of the payment of the just claims that our people have, but he has up-hill work. Some days ago he was asked by Mr. Dingley of Maine, if he was satisfied of the justice and correctness of a claim upon which the committee had reported in bill. Mr. Mahon reviewed the action of congress on these claims and their reference to the court of claims for examination and finding of facts, and passionately declared that congress either ought to pay the claims recommended by the court or abolish the court, so that the people might know what to expect. He declared that the government was a great robber of its private citizens, and he asserted that he would rather have a pauper owe him a thousand dollars than to be a creditor of the United States for that amount.

This was plain, energetic talk but Mr. Mahon usually expresses himself in this way, and on the matter of the claims of our people for restitution of their losses it is no wonder that he should be so much in earnest.

A MURDEROUS MADMAN.

He Kills Five People Then Takes His Own Life.

The following despatch from Rockville, Indiana, dated Sunday last says: Peter Egbert, a carpenter, 22 years old, unmarried, yesterday, without apparent cause or provocation, shot and instantly killed Mrs. Herman Hasks and two children, next door neighbors. He then reloaded his gun, and coming up town, saw Sheriff W. M. Mull and Deputy William Swom in the National bank stairway. Egbert pulled out his weapon and shot the sheriff in the back of the head, killing him instantly. Swom faced the assassin and received a charge of buckshot in his neck, falling at the bank steps and expiring instantly. Egbert then made his escape to the fair grounds, just outside of the town.

A posse immediately organized and started in pursuit. Fifty or more men, armed with shotguns, rifles and pistols, surrounded the grounds. Egbert refused to surrender and was fired on. He did not return the fire, but ran into a stall and sent a load of buckshot into his breast, dying instantly. He was found to have received one slight bullet wound in the fusilade which had been going on. Egbert's sister, at the same hour he killed himself, died at the family home of typhoid fever.

Young Egbert was once confined in a lunatic asylum, but was discharged as cured. No reason can be assigned for the terrible killing, except that the man was insane. No trouble of any kind had ever occurred between the Egberts and Haskes so far as known. Sheriff Mull was a colonel during the war and was prominent in Grand Army circles in Indiana. He was also a Republican politician of wide reputation and was only recently renominated.

George T. Powell, of New York, who for a portion of the season was intimately connected with the work of Farmers' Institutes in Pennsylvania, and who left the work to accept the position of Secretary of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, in his first report, in referring to the farmers of Southern Pennsylvania, writes as follows: "In attending the farmers' institutes of Pennsylvania, within a radius of fifty miles from Philadelphia, I have met the most intelligent, highly cultured men and women that are anywhere to be found. They are skilled farmers, fully abreast with the times on all public questions, and their land is as rich and productive as a century ago. They have literary and social clubs of a high character which are regularly attended. I was impressed with the fact that this fine development is the fruit of help and influence by those far-sighted citizens of Philadelphia a century ago."

Dr. Wm. F. Teeter, 209, South Main street, Chambersburg, Pa. Painless extraction, fine fillings, crown and bridge work, artistic artificial teeth. All work guaranteed. Won't be underbid in prices. 20 years' experience with all the latest and best approved methods in dentistry.

THE SCALES OF JUSTICE.

Regular April Term of Court—A Small Attendance.

The number of people who came to town to attend court on Monday was unusually small. The hotel registers did not contain nearly so many names as are generally found on the first day of court week. This, however, is not a bad indication. The fewer disputes we have among neighbors and the smaller the number of commonwealth cases, the better it is for the taxpayers and for the good morals of the county.

Court convened in regular April term Monday at 10:30 a. m. On the call of the list of grand jurors D. I. Binkley of Antrim, and D. W. Homer of Greencastle borough, were excused. W. H. Brown of Waynesboro, was made foreman. The constables were called to make their returns. Among the items of their reports it was learned that the bridges at Sylvan and at Gamble's need repairs. Roads are bad in several townships, Montgomery and Metal, and at State Line. The mountain road to which the REVIEW referred some time ago, and which leads from Horse Valley to Fannettsburg, is still in a bad way, but little, if any effort being made to improve it. Guide or index boards were down in a number of districts. Two children were reported born out of wedlock, one in Washington and one in Southampton.

When the traverse jurors were called the following were excused: Henry Lippy, Chambersburg; Wm. Conrad, Quincy; W. W. Frantz and Charles F. Koontz, Waynesboro.

Pearle E. Taylor, Esq., was appointed guardian of Lesla, Paul and Herman B. Findlay, minor children of Mrs. Jennie A. Findlay of Fannett township. Garnet Gehr was appointed guardian of Daisy B. Besore, minor child of Mary Besore of Letterkenny.

On motion of Hon. W. U. Brewer of the examining committee, Jos. P. Ranney was admitted to practice in the courts of Franklin county.

The first case called was that of the Commonwealth vs. J. H. Wagonhouser f. & b. on oath of Maggie Callimer. The defendant first pleaded not guilty, but after the evidence of the Commonwealth was in he withdrew his pleas and pleaded guilty. He received the usual sentence.

Charles Jones was charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods, oath of Joseph Middour. The first charge was dismissed. Jones pleaded guilty to the second charge. He claimed to have received two chickens from a white man and a colored man, but did not then suppose they were stolen. His efforts at explanation were not satisfactory to the court as there were many elements of improbability about them. He was sent to jail for four months.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. C. A. Wiles on oath of Mary Ann Spoonhour, f. & b., Wiles pleaded guilty and received the usual sentence.

James Roland and Charles Bert of Greencastle, were charged with larceny of steel traps, on oath of Thomas Clingan. The traps had been set for muskrats and the defendants, who are boys about 17 years of age, took them from the stream. The boys claimed that they had also set traps and in going to lift them had taken some of Clingan's traps by mistake in the dark. He had his traps marked and found them in the boys' possession several days after they had been taken, when they were about to set them in the creek at Heister's mill. Verdict not guilty.

The case of the Commonwealth vs William Bohn, larceny, oath of Capt. John Buchman, was next tried. The parties live near Fayetteville. In March they came to Chambersburg and both drank too much evidently. Buchman says he had $55 in his overcoat pocket in a shot pouch. When he went home he hung up the coat with the money in it and went up stairs to bed. He fell asleep and was awakened some time afterward and saw Bohn running out of the room. Immediately after this the money was missing from the coat. When called to testify Capt. Buchman was challenged because it was said he did not believe in a Supreme Being. He said he does believe in a Supreme Being but not in the God of the Bible. His oath was taken. There was considerable testimony bearing on the case which tended rather to obscure matters than to make them clear for the jury. Verdict not guilty.

Frank Yeager was sent to jail six months for stealing coal from the W. M. R. R. cars.

Joseph Wiley was tried for assault and battery oath of Henry Trumphour. Trumphour had charged Wiley with stealing rails. The charge for stealing the rails was ignored by the grand jury. Trumphour claimed that Wiley had struck him twice. Wiley claimed that he pushed Trumphour off the land which he claimed was his own. There is evidently bad blood between the two parties. Wiley was found guilty. The parties are from Camp Hill.

Isaiah Favorite of Rouzerville, had no place to move on the first of April. Mrs. Susan Downey had an old unoccupied house; into this Favorite moved. He was prosecuted for forcible entry and detainer. He plead guilty to the charge of going into the house. From the evidence it was shown that he was not guilty of any crime, only a trespasser. Mrs. Downey must pay the costs.

Sometime ago Robert S. Smiley had an overcoat taken from the coatroom of the Montgomery House. Some time afterward the coat was found in the possession of Louis Snowden of Waynesboro, who had been employed at the Montgomery House at the time the coat was taken. Snowden claimed he had bought the coat from a boy named Carter in this town for $2 59. Snowden afterward had Carter arrested for the theft of the coat but he was discharged at the hearing. Snowden was found guilty

Jacob Keller, a St. Thomas township school teacher, was charged with assault and battery on oath of George Mull. David Mull, son of the prosecutor, fourteen years old, attended 'Morning Glory' school of which Mr. Keller was teacher. Mull got into a dispute with another pupil, a little girl, when blows were struck. The teacher called them in and made inquiry as to the matter and said it would be settled at the close of school that evening. He whipped the little girl for her part in the affair, asked Mull to come forward and he refused, but drew a knife on the teacher. Then the teacher went to the boy and whipped him quite severely. The charge of the court in this case was of some length. In conclusion he said he thought if the teacher made any mistake, it was in not having a heavier stick. The boy was not crippled or disabled although he was marked. The honest conviction of the court was that the boy was not punished one whit too much. Verdict, not guilty, Mull to pay the costs.

In nearly every part of Berks county muskrats nowadays are used for food, and are pronounced a first class dish. Ten years ago the idea of eating them would have been scorned in nearly every section of Berks. The muskrat is a great deal cleaner with its food than most other animals that have for years been used on the table. It is claimed that muskrat meat is a great deal finer to the taste than that of rabbit.

The Keedysville correspondent of the Hagerstown Morning Herald says: Decoration Day will be observed in this place. The date is not definitely set yet. Everybody is reasonably supposed to know that "Decoration Day"—sometimes we call it Memorial Day—is observed May 30. But if the Keedysville man knows what he writes about, the observance may be held on Christmas, Good Friday or the Fourth of July. It certainly is a queer announcement.

Nora, the two-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. William Stratton, of Federal street, wandered away from home Wednesday morning and before she was found had gone as far south as Garfield street where she was seen weeping and was picked up by Butcher W. H. Smith. The family all started to look for the little one but her grandmother, Mrs. Theophilus Stratton, was the first to get sight of the child. The anxiety of the family was much relieved when she was brought home.

The Waynesboro Gazette says: The other evening Bradly Murray struck the young son of Al. Johnston a heavy blow with a hoe in front of the Washington House. The edge of the hoe made an ugly cut in the lad's forehead. The act was a pure piece of viciousness and deviltry, and entirely unprovoked. This Bradley was convicted of larceny a few terms back and only released on his good behavior, on account of his extreme youth. It looks as though he were shaping matters very rapidly for another term in Fort Greenawalt.

The birthday of General Grant was celebrated with a dinner at the Union League in Philadelphia on Monday evening, at which covers were laid for 300 guests. Colonel Frederick Dent Grant, eldest son of the hero of Appomattox, was the guest of honor. George S. Graham presided, and the speakers inciuded Mayor Warwick, General D. McM. Gregg, Andrew D. White, President Patton, of Princeton University; General M. C. Butler, of South Carolina; Representatives Boutelle, of Maine; Cousins, of Iowa; Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Dalzell, of Pennsylvania.

The veterans of Walker Post G. A. R., of Waynesboro, and a number of other people from that section are making preparations for the encampment to be held here in June. There is no doubt that there will be a large delegation from our neighboring town. Referring to the encampment the Gazette says: Among the many regiment reunions will be that of the 17th Penna. Cavalry, on June 3rd. Lieutenant Bonebrake is now sending out letters announcing the event. There are some four hundred survivors of this gallant regiment. Co. G., the Waynesboro company, numbers about forty survivors and three commissioned officers, Capt. Snively, Lieut's Bonbrake and Potter. No other company in the regiment can boast of so many surviving commissioned officers.

A Phonograph Concert.

Prof. Lyman H. Howe of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been giving a series of phonograph concerts in many sections of the country and wherever he has given them his audiences have been delighted. Among the newspapers that refer to his concerts in terms of the highest commendation is the Republican of Have De Grace, Maryland, where his concert was said to be specially excellent.

Prof. Howe will give his charming and unique entertainment in the M. E. church in this place for the benefit of the Epworth League, Friday evening, May 8, when all who can should be present and have an evening's enjoyment.

Don't forget the date.

Conscience Is Not Dead.

This is the banner year in the history of the "Conscience Fund" of the United States treasury, says the Buffalo Commercial, the amounts already placed to its credit being larger than in any previous year, though only a fourth of 1866 has passed away. The "Fund" was first established in 1861, by Francis E. Spinner, then treasurer of the United States, whose remarkable signature will be well remembered on the early greenbacks and banknotes. It was opened on the receipt of $6,000 in bonds, accompanied by a statement that restitution of what had long been due the government was "prompted by conscience," and this gave the fund its name, which has always been retained. The contributions are always made anonymously, and there is very rarely any clue to the identity of the subscribers.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Items of Interest About You and Our Friends and Those Whom We All Know.

W. A. Stinger and wife, of Willow Hill, were business visitors in town over Monday night. Both have been sufferers from the grip but are now better.

S. A. Gamble, of near Fannettsburg, accompanied by his daughters Charlotte and Carrie, was a business visitor to Chambersburg Friday. The friendship between Comrade Gamble and the writer began in 1850 and has been uninterrupted ever since, and though our meetings are not very frequent they are always very pleasant. Mr. Gamble reports everybody busy and everything quiet about Fannettsburg.

John A. Zullinger, merchant and postmaster at Orrstown, was on the grand jury this week; he paid a pleasant business visit to the REVIEW office Tuesday evening. Mr. Zullinger furnishes a market to those who have good oak timber and work it into shingles. He has now on hand 40,000 to 45,000 good oak shingles which he has bought and now has for sale. In addition to his merchandising, farming etc., he is busy now planting 2600 fruit trees, 1800 of which are peach, 600 are apple and the remainder pear, quince and plum.

Among the kindly visitors to the REVIEW office last week was Comrade W. A. Price, of Waynesboro, a veteran of the old 11th Penna. cavalry. When William was a non-commissioned officer in the ranks of D. company, more than thirty years ago, a horse of ordinary size could carry him along quite speedily when occasion required, but we wouldn't like to have the responsibility put upon us of furnishing a horse now that would carry him over a 300 mile scout. A large sized dromedary or an ordinary sized elephant only, would have backbone and muscle enough to carry him over a six-days' ride.

It Was a Large Funeral.

Referring to the death of the late Eli McCullough, the Mercersburg Journal says: "The funeral cortege was the largest that has passed through our town for years, thereby showing the popularity and esteem in which the deceased was held in the community in which he lived."

Will We Have a Carnival?

A committee composed of the young men of Chambersburg is actively at work endeavoring to secure subscriptions for the carnival which it is proposed to hold Thursday evening of encampment week. It is probable that the young gentlemen will succeed. If they do we will have such a pageant as has never been seen in Chambersburg, and thousands of people will be on hand to see and enjoy it. By all means let the young men be encouraged and have full swing in getting up such a demonstration as will please everybody and will not soon be forgotten.

Another of the Clendenning Children Dead.

We are informed that another of Mrs. Boyd Clendenning's children died at their home near Metal on Saturday of typhoid fever and several others are now lying quite ill from the same disease. It will be remembered that Thomas Clendenning, an older son, died of this disease some weeks ago, after his return from Somerset county.

It will be remembered that there was considerable of a sensation raised because of reports of brutal treatment of the young man by his companions when he was in Somerset county, that he was tied up by the feet and left in that condition. From what we have learned recently we believe there was no truth whatever in these reports—that there was no foundation whatever for the stories of cruelty that were told of his companions.

Annual Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The eighth annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, Harrisburg District, will be held here Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 1. 2 and 3. The district includes the Cumberland Valley and Dauphin, Lebanon and Adams counties. The program briefly stated is as follows: Friday, 3 p. m., Central Presbyterian lecture room, opening service, "The Holy Spirit," J. W. Dean.

Friday evening 7:30, M. E. church, address of welcome, Rev. B. H. Mosser; response, W. H. Rinck, Harrisburg; address, C. E. Hurlbert.

Saturday morning and afternoon, Central Presbyterian lecture room, addresses by gentlemen from Steelton, Gettysburg, Middletown and other places.

Saturday evening, First Lutheran church, praise service and addresses by Rev. George S. Chambers, D. D., of Harrisburg, "Gospel Truths in Common Faith."

Sunday 9 a. m., association parlor, consecration meeting.

Sunday 3:30 p. m., M. E. church, men's mass meeting, address by F. B. Shipp, state secretary.

Sunday evening, Central church, platform meeting, addresses by State Secretary Shipp, Indian delegates and others. Farewell service. Harrisburg Y. M. C. A. quartet will sing at all services.

Sad Death of a Young Lady.

On Monday of last week Miss Maggie Scott Minnich, daughter of James Minnich who lives near Saluvia, Fulton county, took poison with suicidal intent and expired within an hour afterward. Just after taking the poison she called to her father who was plowing near the house—within hearing of her voice. He hurried to the house as fast as he could when the daughter threw herself into his arms, and after addressing him quite affectionately two or three times she lay back in his arms and died. A letter which she left explained the cause of her action. She had been receiving the addresses of a young gentleman in the neighborhood for some time and believing he had deserted her she gave way to despondency and committed the rash and sad act. She had left directions for every detail of her funeral—the minister, the sermon, the text, the pall-bearers. In fact nothing seemed to have been omitted or forgotten. She even recommended to her father some one who should keep house for him (he was a widower) after she was gone.

Strange to say, within a very few hours after her death, a letter came from the young man who was evidently her lover, stating that he would be to see her within a few days. If the letter had reached its destination three or four hours earlier she would probably still be living and looking forward hopefully to a happy life with her betrothed.

She was an exemplary young woman and highly esteemed by all who knew her. There is much sympathy with the surviving father, brothers and sisters because of the bereavement that they suffer in such a terrible fashion.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Those Who Have Passed to the Great Beyond—The Death Record In Franklin County and Elsewhere.

Miss Carrie Hoover, daughter of John O. Hoover, died at her home, Washington Cliff House, Penmar, Monday evening, the 20th inst., of pulmonary affection, in her thirteenth year. She was buried Wednesday at Harbaugh's church.

James K. Culbertson, a former resident of Chambersburg, died suddenly in Chicago Wednesday night of last week. His remains were brought to Chambersburg Sunday night. The funeral was private and took place Monday morning; interment in Falling Spring graveyard.

Mrs. Catherine Hoffman died at her residence in Carlisle about 4 o'clock Thursday evening. She was conversing with her sister, Mrs. Laura Hays, when suddenly she fell from her chair to the floor. When picked up she was unconscious and expired in a few moments without uttering a word. She was an estimable woman and was a consistent member of the Lutheran church.

Mrs. Susannah M. Morganthall, mother of A. D. Morganthall, postmaster of Waynesboro, died at her home in that place on Friday, April 17, in her 75th year. She had lived all her life in Waynesboro and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was the mother of fourteen children, seven of whom are still living. She was a member of the Lutheran church and her name is enrolled on the records of the first Sunday school ever held in Waynesboro in the old Union, now the Brethren, church and dates back to 1834. The funeral took place Sunday a week, the services being held in the Lutheran church. Her pastor, Rev. H. S. Cook, paid her a worthy tribute in beautiful words. The interment was in Green Hill cemetery.

Methodist Conference.

Those who are desirous of the recognition of women at the coming general conference of the Methodist church, at Cleveland, next month, says the Harrisburg Call, are making a strong effort to secure the necessary majority. As it will require a three-fourths vote of the members of the conference to secure the admission of women, the task is by no means a light one. In the various annual conferences recently held the women secured a majority of the votes necessary to the adoption of this cause, but failed by a slight margin to get enough votes in the forthcoming general conference to secure the three-fourths majority required to enact the amendment.

The votes thus far show that while the latter probably will not be able to secure the required number of votes, an overwhelming number of the ministers favor their cause. But little more than one-fifth of the clergymen still stand out against the women, who are defeated by what is a very narrow margin.

The question may be deferred another four years, but it has been clearly shown that Methodism favors woman's cause. The women will surely win at the next general conference by a safe majority. The church is feeling the tendency of the age toward the recognition of woman and her influence.

Happily Wedded.

A very impressive marriage ceremony was that which united in bonds of holy wedlock Samuel S. Roth of Middletown, Pa., and Miss Helen Byrd Bitner, daughter of Prof. H. A. and Mrs. Bitner of Scotland, this county. The wedding took place Wednesday evening, April 22, in the U. B. church in Scotland, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. E. Kleffman, assisted by Rev. Ridgway of the M. E. church in Middletown. Many friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony; they were from Middletown, Harrisburg, Shiremanstown, Carlisle, Shippensburg, Chambersburg, Waynesboro, Washington township, this county and other points. James M. Hoover, Chambersburg and Frank Myers, Harrisburg, were the ushers. Misses Frances and Sarah Myers, also of Harrisburg, were the flower girls. Miss L. Belle Etter of Scotland was bridesmaid and Clayton Dietz of Shiremanstown groomsman. The wedding march was played by Miss Mame Slichter.

After the ceremony a very pleasant reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. There were many beautiful and valuable presents which will long remind the happy couple of the occasion which united them for life. The bride and groom left on the late train for Middletown where they will have their home.

The bride is a graduate of the C. V. State Normal school and has taught successfully a number of terms. The groom is an active business man of Middletown and is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. Their many friends wish them a large measure of happiness and usefulness and that their lives may be prolonged into a green old age.

A Monument to the Old 77th Regiment.

The following letter from Captain George W. Skinner, President of the 77th Penna Regimental Association, explains itself. It should be stated that the letter is addressed to survivors of the regiment. It is possible that Captain Skinner has not the names and addresses of all the survivors of the regiment in this county, and if so those who receive the REVIEW and have not heard from him may regard this letter as personal to themselves. We might say in this connection that Housum Post by a unanimous vote at its last meeting granted the use of the hall to the 77th survivors from 3.30 to 6 p. m. of Wednesday, June 3, for their reunion.

DEAR COMRADE:—The monument to be erected at Chickamauga in honor of the 77th Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers has now been completed and we have received photograpic views of it which show it to be a very neat and artistic piece of workmanship. Believing that many of the members of the regiment might wish to have copies of this photographic view, we have made an arrangement by which they can be furnished by mail at the following prices: Photo 5x8 inches, 25 cents a piece; Photo 8x10 inches, 50 cents a piece. Any member desiring one of these photographs should send in his order at once to this office, accompanied by the cash, and the photographs will be mailed as soon as they can be ordered and received from Chattanooga.

It has been suggested that we should hold a reunion of our regiment during the Department Encampment at Chambersburg, Pa., June 2 and 3; if you approve of holding such a reunion and think you can be present, please signify your intention by addressing me at once so that we may know whether enough members can be gotten together to make a respectable crowd.

Very respectfully,
GEORGE W. SKINNER, President.
CAMPBELL STANTON, Secretary.

Three sudden deaths occurred at Port Republic, N. J., within as many hours on Saturday, and the town is wonder-stricken with the occurrence. David Cole, a farmer, thirty-six years of age, was seized with a violent fit of coughing and strangled before his wife could summon assistance. The same evening Mrs. Jemima Core dropped dead while washing her supper dishes at her home a few rods away. Mrs. Hoover, a neighbor, who was called to render assistance, suddenly staggered and fell on her way home, and before the friends who saw her fall could summon a doctor life was extinct. All three persons were in good health, and their sudden deaths within a short time is considered something remarkable.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE IN THE SAME PLACE.

Again we have been visited by a disastrous FIRE, this time doing us more than double the damage it did a few months ago. Not only were we damaged to a much larger extent but all our

IMMENSE NEW STOCK OF DRY GOODS
Dress Goods and Notions

for the Spring trade were opened only a few days before the fire occurred.

What follows this fearful loss? That our stock must be closed out in less than half the time it was before. Our goods are still wet and what were left dry at the time of the fire the recent rains have damaged to some extent. We now have a temporary roof over the store and we will be ready for the waiting multitudes that are crowding our doors for admittance,

Experience costs money but it teaches us the value of having more help at "Fire sales," and this time you may crowd us all you will for we will be prepared with a score of willing salesmen.

The bargains we gave you before are still fresh in your memory, but my friends, it only gave you a small idea of the sacrifice we are compelled to make this time.

Our time for selling is shorter and our stock not only larger but newer and more attractive goods were crowded in our store this time than ever in the history of our business. Goods that were sold at half price before, this time will be almost given away to make them go quickly, knowing as we do that the longer they are on our shelves the worse they may get.

If they are bought quickly and dried at home they will be good as ever. We have neither time nor room for drying them.

The most wonderful and greatest sacrifice known to modern merchandising will commence in our store Saturday, April 4, and continue until every piece of goods in the store is sold.

Don't wait; come early, and remember that at our former fire sale hundreds were disappointed because they waited too long and the goods were all sold.

Yours truly,

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Lesson For Sunday, May 3.

International Bible lesson for Sunday, May 3, 1896, from Luke 17: 5-19. Title: Faith. Golden text: "Increase our faith." The "Teaching Hints" given by Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D. D., in The Sunday School Times are more valuable than anything we are able to write upon the lesson, we therefore give them and commend them to the careful study of all who are interested in Sunday school Bible work:

The disciples were often amazed at the teachings of our Lord. Once, we read, they were astonished "out of measure." In our lesson for to-day they seem to have been much impressed at his teaching with regard to the matter of forgiveness, and when he told them that they were to be ready to forgive a man seven times in one day, they exclaimed in amazement, "Increase our faith." This is the only time when they felt that to do his bidding needed a larger faith than they possessed.

Of course, the majority of teachers will dwell largely on the miracle of the healing of the ten lepers. This took place probably in Samaria. The ten came to the Master, approaching as near as they dared, and, lifting up their voices, they asked for mercy. Without touching them, he bade them go and show themselves to the priests, according to the law of Moses. They all started at once. But at some time on the way a sudden change came over them, and they felt that they had been perfectly cured. What a moment that must have been to them, when they felt the thrill of health return, and, looking at their sores and blotches, saw that they had all disappeared! Now they could return to their homes and to society once more, and need not keep aloof from the world, and cry, "Unclean!" "Unclean!" as they saw any one approaching. But, alas! of the ten, nine never thought of going back to him who had wrought this vast change, but rushed off to their homes and business. Only one, and he a Samaritan, was grateful enough to go back to Jesus, and say "Thank you."

The ten were alike in their need. All were lepers, and therefore incurable. No remedy existed for their malady, and they could only look forward to miserable lives and dreadful deaths.

They were alike in their prayer. "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us," sprang from all lips. They all felt that, if he would, he could help, and so they joined in that pathetic chorus.

They were alike in their obedience. As soon as he told them what to do they all obeyed. None said, "Well, I do not see that I am well, and there is no use in my going to show myself to the priest." No, all started at once.

They were alike in their healing. There was no difference here. Jew and Samaritan alike were made perfectly well, and that at once. There remained not a blotch or a scar on any of them.

But here they parted company. When they were healed, one started off alone to find him who had thus richly blessed him; while the nine, so far as we know, never went near Jesus again. This led Jesus, with infinite sadness in look and voice, to say, "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger."

This sad story applies to modern people and times. The world at large is still well represented by this company of needy individuals. It is all one, in that it cries to God for help. Millions of prayers go up to God each day for succor. Stop a moment and think. In a school of one thousand members, if each scholar prays twice in each day, there are eleven millions three hundred thousand prayers offered by them each year. And how many of these prayers do you suppose are answered? Many, many tens of thousands. And of those which are not answered, there are many which are denied through God's mercy. He knows that, if he gave us our request, it would be for our harm, and not for our good.

But of the many thousands that are answered, how many do you suppose are recognized by suitable thanksgiving? Even in the days of the Psalmist, he was forced to exclaim, in a sort of sad refrain, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" This he does over and over again (see Psa. 107). In this matter of gratitude to God for favors received, we are much at fault. See, even a dog will wag his tail if you give him a bone, and that is his way of saying "Thank you." It seems to be reserved for man, God's highest creature, to be most ungrateful. Show the class that we ought to thank God, as well as beg from him.

It may not be amiss to call attention to the fact that we read, "It came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed." It was while they were in the line of obedience that they got the blessing they so craved. If they had waited, and said, "We do not see that there is any use in our starting till we notice some improvement," they would have received no cleansing at all. Their obedience (under the blessing of God) brought their healing.

So with us in our spiritual lives. We go to God, and ask for pardon, and the gift of His Holy Spirit. That is right. But then we should at once begin our Christian walk. To stand still, and say, "I do not think that God has answered my prayer, for I do not feel any better," is to do wrong. As soon as you have in earnest asked for pardon and for spiritual life, go to work. Do not stand still, and ask for joy, but get to your duty, and joy will come in due time. Obedience to his commands is the only way in which we get the assurance of blessing. But that will never fail us.

Cost of Bad Roads

According to statistics collected by the officer of Road Inquiry of the Department of Agriculture, the amount of loss each year by bad roads of the country is almost beyond belief. Some 10,000 letters of inquiry were sent to intelligent and reliable farmers throughout the country, and returns were obtained from about 1,200 counties, giving the average length of haul in miles from farms to markets and shipping points, the average weight of load hauled and the average length per ton for the whole length of haul. Summerized, it appears that the general average length of 2,000 pounds, and the average cost per ton per mile 25 cents, or $3 for the entire load.

Allowing conservative estimates for tonnage of all kinds carried over public roads, the aggregate expense of this transportation is figured at $946,414,600 per annum. Those in a position to judge calculate that two-thirds of this, or nearly $631,000,000, could be saved if the roads were in reasonably good condition. At $4,000 per mile a very good road can be constructed, and if an amount equaling the savings of one year were applied to improving highways, 257,000 miles of road in this country could be put in condition. The effect of this would be a permanent improvement, and not only would the farmer be astonished in the sudden reduction in his road tax, but he would also wonder at the remarkable falling off in the cost of transportation. He would also find that he required fewer horses and less feed for them. He could make two trips to market a day instead of one, when ability to get his goods there at a time when high prices are ruling is a matter of great consequence. Farmers are beginning to apply a little simple arithmetic to some of these matters, and it is not too much to expect that in the near future we shall see a decided revolution in the condition of our rural highways.——New York Recorder.

Woman's Hour.

Mrs. Mary Harlan, of Coxsville, Ind, mother of ex-United States Senator Harlan, of Iowa, and grandmother of Mrs. Robert T. Lincoln, was 100 years old on March 20. At the birthday reception there were present a daughter 78 years old and a son 76.

Pound Cake.—One pound of granulated sugar, one pound of flour, with one teaspoonful of baking powder well sifted; fourteen ounces of butter, warmed to the consistency of sour cream; ten eggs. Beat the eggs, whites and yolks together, a few minutes, add the sugar, beat again a few minutes, then add the butter; beat again a few minutes; lastly add the flour, beating the above in all about ten minutes.

Hints for Housewives.—To remove a refractory screw from wood, heat a piece of iron red hot and hold it on top of the screw for a minute or two; then the screwdriver will easily take out the screw if used while the screw is warm.

The cleanest way to drive roaches from drawers or closed shelves is to sprinkle powdered borax over and around the shelves and cover with clean paper.

A Latter Day Fable

A dish of ice cream and a cigarette one day had a quarrel.

"I am bad medicine," said the frigid one. "I contain t-y-r-o-t-o-x-i c-o-n, besides other ingredients and foreign substances. I am deadly."

"Poor, weak thing!" said the cigarette. "Behold me—the roll of death and the slayer alike of youth and old age. Neither wit, learning, eloquence nor beauty is proof against me. I am made of opium, chloral, boot heels, sponges, dog fennel and other deleterious substances. Inhale my fumes and die."

They continued their argument for the pugilistic championship of the world at some length. Finally a new woman smoked the cigarette and a sweet young thing ate the ice cream. This ended the dispute, but did not end the new woman nor the sweet young thing

Moral:—Beware of this new woman at all times and of the sweet young thing during the ice cream season.

Wrong Patriotism.

Under "Topics of the Time" the Century says editorially:

"Why is it that as a nation we are so quick to resent an insult to our flag abroad, and yet we are willing to bear without serious remonstrance the disgrace of having ignorant and corrupt bosses as our despots, they having really deprived us of popular government by taking power into their own hands. Is there not something the matter with our patriotism when such a condition of mind as this exists. We are not merely indifferent to our political state, but we are able to treat it as a matter for joking, and are scarcely shocked at all by the daily revelations of our abject subserviency. Indeed, an alarmingly large number of people look upon boss rule as the necessary outcome of our form of government, and say that with universal suffrage nothing better can be hoped for. Here is a field for true patriotism the like of which can be found nowhere else. The amount of work to be done is sufficient to command the energies of all intelligent Americans. To overthrow the bosses and their methods, to establish in place of the low and narrow door to political distinction a high and broad one, all men who love their country must go into politics, into the primaries and nominating conventions, and insist upon their right to select the candidates."

A New Pension Bill.

There was a long conference in Speaker Reed's committee room Thursday, at which were also present Messrs. Dingley, of Maine; Dalzell, of Pennsylvania; Payne, of New York, and Pickler, of South Dakota.

Mr. Pickler's Invalid Pensions Committee has recently completed a general administrative pension bill, designed to facilitate the allowance of pensions. Its most important feature is one which restores the ratings on pensions under the law of 1890, which were in vogue under the Harrison Administration.

It replaces on the rolls the men who have been dismissed and re-established the pensions of those who have been reduced by the office. It further provides that no pension shall be discontinued or reduced hereafter for fraud or recovery from disability. The bill will, if enacted into a law, increase the pension budget between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 annualy.

The purpose of the conference was to consider this measure, correct its phraseology where necessary and so perfect its legal form as not only to secure its passage through Congress, but the President's approval as well.

Ourselves and Neighbors.

From Waynesboro we learn that Daniel Johnston of that place is turning out brick so fast that one man can scarcely count them, and it seems that all are bought before they are burned, and many before they are made or even the clay of which they are to be made has been dug; 70,000 have been furnished to two parties within the last few days.

The program of the 12th annual session of the C. V. Sunday School Assembly, at Williams' Grove, July 21 to 31, has been issued. The devotional exercises will be under the supervision of Prof. Lowe of Philadelphia. Mrs. Florence Paxson will conduct the children's hour exercises. Dr. Jeffers of York, Dr. Crawford of Allegheny, and Revs. Delk of Hagerstown, and E. S. Bowman, Mechanicsburg, are down for topics. Rev. Shontz of Chambersburg, can supply requests for copies of the program.

Ill is still occasionally heard, even among the better class in the piney woods of Georgia and Alabama in its Shakespearean sense of dangerous or wicked, as "The copperhead is an ill snake," or "Johnny is a very ill," that is, naughty, "boy this morning." I am told by a friend from Kentucky that the same usage, though rare, is not unknown among the same class in that State. To "favor," meaning to resemble, as "He favors his father," was good English in the days of Addison and Shakespeare, and its derivative, ill-favored, is still current.—Washington Star.

The Hagerstown Globe of Thursday says: Solomon Blessing, postmaster at Brunswick, Md., went to Frederick Wednesday of last week, and appeared before United States Commissioner Edw. Y. Goldsborough, and had a warrant sworn out charging his assistant at the postoffice, J. F. Reed, with appropriating postoffice money-order funds to his own private use to the extent of $140. Police Officer John A. Simpson went in search of Reed and arrested him as he was about leaving on the 6.20 p. m. train of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. He was taken before Commissioner Goldsborough and was released in $300 bail for his appearance. He is about thirty years of age and has a wife and child.

The Waynesboro Village Record tells the following pitiful story: "Brooding over a small debt, contracted in the purchase of a property near Roadside, where his family have recently been living, David Embly became violently insane and was taken to the county almshouse by Policeman Rock, Monday. Embly formerly lived at Rouzerville where he worked at his trade, shoemaking, and had a business that yielded him a fair competence, out of which he managed to save enough to pay the greater part of the purchase price of the property at Roadside, and apparently was getting along as well as could be expected. Evidently the worry over the debt and the idea that he could not pay it unbalanced his mind, as in his ravings this seemed to be his greatest enemy. At first little was thought of the matter by his family, as he would recover from his spells of melancholy and be as rational as ever, but he continued to grow worse from time to time until he became violent when they thought best to have him removed to a place where he would be unable to do himself or family bodily harm. It is thought by proper treatment he may recover from his present unfortunate condition."

The Shippensburg Chronicle of Thursday thus tells of the return of young Shryock who had wandered away from the University of Pennsylvania while in a condition of mental aberration: As is well-known to all our home readers, Charles Shryock, son of Mr. S. S. Shryock, disappeared from the University of Pennsylvania, where he was a medical student, about five weeks ago and since that time an active search has been going on for him. On Monday Mr. Shryock was summoned to Philadelphia on a clue, which, however, proved to be a false one, and on Tuesday a letter was received from Charles from New York. Mr. C. B. Cole at once telephoned the message to Mr. Shryock and he took the first train and found his son Wednesday morning. They returned to Shippensburg Wednesday night. It will be remembered that two years ago Mr. Shryock disappeared from the University in the same manner while suffering from temporary aberration of the mind brought on by grip and overstudy, but was found in New York after ten days. He was in much better condition this time, both mentally and physically, than before. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Shryock rejoice with them that their son has been found and their anxiety relieved.

Keep a bowl of oatmeal on the washstand, and after washing the hands dry them in the meal. The skin will be kept white and smooth, and less liable to chap by this process.

A woman cobbler does a flourishing business in Lewiston, Me. She is a young French Canadian, named Eliza Lamay, and she works at her cobbler's bench in the window of her little store on Lincoln street. She learned her trade in Canada, and apparently does not think there is any thing strange in a woman working publicly at the business. She is said to be a very good cobbler, too.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world and tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record of human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, &c.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson; majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industrial emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.

Demorest's Magazine Free,

And what a magazine it is! For 1896 it will be more brilliant than ever before. New management, new methods, new ideas. Each copy contains an exquisite reproduction in colors of some celebrated picture by a famous artist, worthy to adorn the walls of the most refined home. It is affirmed that DEMOREST'S is the only complete Family Magazine published combining all of the most excellent points of its contemporaries, besides having inimitable features of its own. DEMOREST'S is actually a Dozen Magazines in one.

It is a Digest of Current Events and Ideas for the busy man or woman, a Review and a Store-house of Interest for all. Wives, mothers, sisters and daughters can find exactly what they need to amuse and instruct them, also practical helps in every department of domestic and social life, including the furnishing and ornamenting of the home, embroidery, bric-a-brac, artistic and fancy work of all kinds, etc., etc., and suggestions and advice regarding the well-being and dressing of their own persons.

The scope of the articles for 1895 and 1896 will cover the whole country and its various interests, and the articles will be profusely illustrated with the finest engravings, and, in addition, it will publish the best and purest fiction. It treats at length Out-of-Door Sports, Home Amusements and Entertainments; it gives a great deal of attention to Children's Department, and "Our Girls," and has a Monthly Symposium by Celebrated People, in which are discussed important questions of the hour of interest to the older readers.
